Commentary abstract

Nature Immunology 9, 109 - 112 (2008)

Corrected online: 6 February 2008 | doi:10.1038/ni0208-109

There is a Corrigendum (March 2008) associated with this Commentary.

Connecting immunology research to public health: Cuban biotechnology

Agustin Lage¹

1. Agustin Lage is with the Centre of Molecular Immunology, Havana City 11600, Cuba. e-mail: lage@cim.sld.cu

Abstract

The close connection between immunology and public health has been successful in reducing infant mortality and infectious diseases in Cuba. The next challenge is to find treatments for chronic diseases of adulthood and to extend life expectancy.

Source: http://www.nature.com/ni/journal/v9/n2/abs/ni0208-109.html