

Research Promotion and Development Interns 2013-II

Stefanie Soelling – Public Health Research Intern

Stefanie Soelling is a senior at Georgetown University and is originally from Seattle, Washington. She plays for the women's golf team at Georgetown and plans to attend medical school upon graduation. She is a Biology of Global Health major and this created her interest in science and policy.

Contact: soellings@paho.org

Jimmy Le – Public Health Research Intern

Jimmy Le is currently completing his Master's degree in International Affairs and Global Health from Sciences Po, Paris). He is originally from San Jose, California, and has a background in Biology and Literature from UC Berkeley. His research interests include public policy, development studies, and health systems management.

Contact: lej@paho.org

Daniella Restrepo – Research Communications Intern

Daniella Restrepo is a journalist and communications professional from Colombia. She is currently pursuing her M.A. in International Politics at American University, with a concentration in International Organizations and International Communication. Daniella speaks Spanish, English, Italian, and French, and is in the process of learning Portuguese.

Contact: restrepod@paho.org