

The Pan American Health Organization / World Health Organization in collaboration with the Iberoamerican Network of Health Promoting Universities \(RIUPS\) and the Católica del Norte University in Chile are pleased to announce the winners of the national and international awards of the First Iberoamerican Contest of Good Health Promotion Practices in Universities and Higher Education Institutions

The purpose of this contest is to open a space to acknowledge work by universities in implementing programs to improve health in and outside the university settings, as well as identify and disseminate successful experiences that can set up good examples as health promoting universities.

By the closing date of January 31 of 2013, 90 experiences were officially registered representing 18 countries. National juries selected a single candidate to compete for the International Awards under each of the four contest categories. Please, click on the corresponding link below to view the list of winners of both National and International Awards for the First Iberoamerican Contest on Good Health Promoting Practices in Universities and Higher Education Institutions.

2012 National Award Winners

2012 International Award Winners

