International trade & investment treaties
The protection of public health

Wolfgang Alschner, 30 June 2023
Agenda

1) Basic principles

2) Public health measures and trade law

3) Public health measures and investment law

4) Conclusion
Basic Principles

1) Public health > international trade
International trade rules do not prevent states from imposing public health-related measures.

2) No one size fits all
States can set their own level of public health protection, which may deviate from that set by their trading partners.
Basic Principles

1) Public health vs international trade
Basic Principles

1) Public health > international trade
International trade rules do not prevent states from imposing public health-related measures.

Measures do not have to sacrifice public protection to become less trade restrictive.
Basic Principles

1) Public health > international trade

International trade rules do not prevent states from imposing public health-related measures.

Measures can restrict trade if that is necessary to protect public health.
Basic Principles

2) One size fits all?

Level of Public Health Protection

Canada

Antigua
Basic Principles

2) No one size fits all
States can set their own level of public health protection, which may deviate from that set by their trading partners.

Each state can set its own level of public health protection.
Public health measures and trade law

Trade agreements primarily protect against origin-based discrimination between products. (GATT Art. III, TBT Art. 2.1)

Public health exceptions allow states to treat products differently that raise different health concerns. (GATT Art. XX, TBT Art. 2.1 & 2.2)
Public health measures and trade law

Faculté de droit – Section de common law
Faculty of Law – Common Law Section
Public health measures and trade law
Public health measures and trade law

Trade agreements primarily protect against origin-based discrimination between products.
(GATT Art. III, TBT Art. 2.1)

Public health exceptions allow states to treat products differently that raise different health concerns.
(GATT Art. XX, TBT Art. 2.1 & 2.2)

→ Scientific evidence helps justify differential treatment
→ Due process (non-arbitrariness) ensures equity
Public health measures and investment law

Investment agreements primarily protect against unfair treatment and expropriation of investments.

Treaties impose a high threshold for violations given that states have right to regulate in the public interest.
Public health measures and investment law

Pre-supposes eligible foreign investment (e.g. a company, an intellectual property right).
Public health measures and investment law

Losses or reduced profits alone do not lead to investment treaty violation.
Conclusion

Robust protection for public health regulation under international economic treaties.
Outlook

Importance of public health is being further strengthened in more recent treaties.

RESEARCH ARTICLE | Open Access | ©

Public health clauses in international investment agreements: Sword or shield?

Anne Marie Thow, Wolfgang Alschner, Faisal Aljunied

First published: 21 March 2023 | https://doi.org/10.1111/1758-5899.13199