The right to health is a value enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and explicitly stated in the Constitution of the World Health Organization (WHO). The International Covenant on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights, represented with Article 12 on the right to health.

1. The period prior to the creation of national health institutions.
2. The creation of modern national health institutions.
3. The growing delivery of health benefits to the non-salaried poor, in tandem with further segmentation of the health system.
4. The search for equity, characterized by reforms aimed at equalizing the health benefits.

The Member States of PAHO committed to intensifying efforts to make the right to health a reality.

Lesbians, homosexuals, bisexuals, and trans people were also included and a document was published describing progress in the conditions for guaranteeing the right to reproductive health and healthy motherhood.

The Member States approved the Strategy on Health-related Law.

Maternal mortality
Mortality in children under 5
Averages and distribution of chronic diseases by income level