

Logistical Information

Montevideo is the capital and largest city of the Oriental Republic of Uruguay. It is located in the southern part of the country and is the southernmost capital of the Americas. It is also the seat of the administrative headquarters of the South American trade bloc (MERCOSUR) and the Latin American Integration Association (ALADI).

Its net population is 1,319,108 inhabitants (2011), but considering the metropolitan area it reaches 1,947,604 inhabitants, which corresponds to approximately half of the country's population. The city has an ideal bay that forms a natural port, being the most important city in the country and one of the most important cities in the Southern Cone. Montevideo has the highest quality of life in Latin America and is among the 30 safest cities in the world.
